

THE BACKYARD COOPERATIVE

Grow Share and Trade

I am sure we can all remember times in our lives where we have witnessed or even participated in backyard farming. Back in the good ol' days it was just called gardening but the gardeners of yesteryear also grew food. Cucumbers for pickling, tomatoes for canning and various berries for preserves were typical backyard crops grown to last through the winter months. Many backyards had fruit trees and vegetable gardens ensuring fresh seasonal product would adorn the table at dinner time.

In our neck of the woods you can plant in all 4 seasons. There is always something to grow in spring summer fall and even winter!

HARRIS NURSERYLAND We support backyard horticulture and have everything you need to grow great veggies, fruits and flowers. Have fun growing, sharing and trading!

THE DELTA SCHOOL DISTRICT has been an innovator with educational programs. It is in the midst of developing an Agriculture Academy and supports horticultural education.

THE BACKYARD COOPERATIVE encourages everyone to get out back and have fun growing, sharing and trading in their own neighbourhoods all year round!

The BYCOOP is not going to change the world but it might change your salad bowl.

Ian Paton

Delta Councillor and local farmer

The Corporation of Delta recently completed its Agriculture Plan. Now it is time to work to implement some of the recommendations.

We need to find new entrants in to the business of farming. A good way to do that would be to surround our youth with everything horticultural. If our children are exposed to growing things at school and in their backyards, they may develop an interest in some aspect.

Have fun, grow some great things and maybe save yourself a buck or two.
